I was drawn to RMIT’s renowned design facilities, which allow their students to have a complete experience in learning different fields.

The visual merchandising (VM) course is very informative and hands-on, allowing students to practise real VM work. It combines discussion and practical design processes, which helps the students to put theory into practice – the best learning process.

RMIT is the best learning environment because it is fully equipped with facilities that inspire and support students to be more creative.

I have plans to pursue more study at a higher level. Short courses have allowed me to experience what it could be like studying in RMIT and it definitely meets my expectations. That’s why I’m working on my application for a longer program right now.

Bin Dixon-Ward
Jewellery and Accessories: 3D Modelling and Printing

Bin Dixon-Ward was one of the first contemporary jewellery makers to employ digital technologies and 3D printing in her work. Bin has exhibited in Australia, Europe, Japan and North America and is the recipient of several awards including the Itami Award in Japan and Toowoomba Contemporary Wearables Student Prize.

Bin’s work is held in public and private collections including the National Gallery of Victoria, the RMIT W.E. McMillan Collection, the Powerhouse Museum and Musée des Arts Décoratifs (the Louvre), in Paris.

Bin’s approach is making contemporary jewellery as a way of understanding the built environment, communicating her interest in urban landscapes and the role of digital technologies in crafts.

Tim Cameron

Rhinoceros – Level 1

Tim received a Master of Architecture from the University of Melbourne where he learnt Rhino 3D and Grasshopper, using them frequently to fabricate large-scale architectural prototypes. Finding particular enjoyment from working on complex problems through rapid prototyping and developing the skill of translating digital models to physical with a range of fabrication tools (CNC Router, 3D printers and laser cutters) led him to build new bespoke fabrication tools.

I’ve been using Rhino 3D for over a decade, and I am still learning new tips and tricks from my students!

I like to take complex problems and break them down step by step, to understand them and look for elegant solutions, often using the translation from digital to physical in this process.

I like to see the slow reveal of the problem and emerging solution through iterative solutions. When an iteration is successful based on previous experience it’s exciting for me.

People who complete this course are able to design, make and fabricate using Rhino 3D. Others use Rhino 3D for drafting, rendering or as a design iteration tool.

Alyssa Smedley
Adobe After Effects – Beginning Motion Graphics

Alyssa is a freelance animator, illustrator and designer. She is also a founder, co-director and creative at Pirate Size Productions.

Motion graphics is one of those fields that isn’t really restricted to a sector. It overlaps so many fields. If you ever have to communicate a story or an idea online, in video, in film or on the socials... motion graphics techniques will help you do it better.

Come to week one with ideas in mind of the holes in your knowledge that you want to fill. Get a Pinterest, sign up to Behance, nab an invite to Dribbble, scope out some Vimeos... Come to class ready to share your greatest and wildest dreams. Then, over the next eight weeks, we’ll get you started on the mountainous, bendy, windy, valleyed, topsy-turvy, multiplane highway to motion graphics adventures.
